Why Library For All

Library For All is a leading international not for profit publisher of high quality, age appropriate, culturally relevant books and educational resources. We deliver books to communities where history, poverty or remoteness prevents access to traditional libraries. We’re there when books are not, turning stories from the communities we serve into engaging, illustrated children’s books.

Our library features books for elementary readers, with content balanced across fiction and non-fiction, and a range of themes that can easily be aligned to teaching curricula.

Our library currently includes a Papua New Guinea collection, a Pacific Plus collection, and a culturally agnostic collection of titles known as Books That Travel.

To deliver on our mission to make knowledge accessible to all, equally, Library For All curates original books and open source titles, then uses its own globally available digital library application to share the content.

Alongside Library For All's digital library solution we also offer a scalable, cost-effective wholesale print and distribution service to create physical libraries for schools, communities and families on demand.

MANOA’S FIRST KULA TRIP (1, 2 & 3)
Jordon Dean
Fiction

This was the big day! Manoa was going to accompany his father and the other tribesmen on a Kula Trade trip to the faraway islands. This book represents a deep element of Papua New Guinean culture whereby boys come of age by participating in tribal traditions. The Kula Trade is an annual ceremonial exchange from the Milne Bay Province region. This 3 part story describes young Manoa’s excitement at finally being able to experience the journey he has seen his father make many times before. He loads baskets with food, hugs his mother and joins the men on their voyage. After they have traded the food for clay pots and baskets, they will return to enjoy a celebratory feast.

Library For All champions the inclusion of community stories, written by local authors who are keen to keep cultural stories alive for new generations. Books like this one operate as welcome mirrors for children in the related region, as well as fascinating windows for readers elsewhere in the world who are new to the traditions of Papua New Guinea.

ARE YOU NONDA ERWI?
Josephine Yaga
Fiction

Are you nonda Erwi? No, I’m nonda Guwumplg. A young girl searches the forest to find nonda Erwi. She meets many other types of nonda as she goes, but she must find nonda Erwi in order to make a tasty, healing soup for her sick mother. This story introduces the reader to different kinds of wild mushroom (nonda) as well as the concept of natural remedies. The illustrations will help children to identify these plants when exploring their own environments.

Library For All’s PNG collection is primarily written in English, meeting the requirements of the national curriculum. Books like this, however, can provide a gentle introduction to regional languages by incorporating local terms into the story. If the reader is new to this language – which is spoken in the Highlands Region – the words are put in context by the imagery. This serves to both expand the reader’s vocabulary and encourage an understanding of the diversity within Papua New Guinean cultures.

LFASKU00035

The Kula Trade was a very important event for Manoa’s people. Everyone in the village had harvested yams and fished for tuna so that they could trade their goods for clay pots and arm shells.

SUMMERTIME STORM
Kayt Duncan
Fiction

Summertime where I live is storm season. In tropical climates, summer is a time for blazing sunshine as well as fierce storm activity. Here, we meet a brave girl helping to calm her timid little brother as the wind whips up the washing and the lightning splits the sky. Boom! Kaboom! When she has finally had quite enough of the commotion, she shouts at the storm, insisting that it go out to sea. And do you know what? It does! Delightfully abstract pastel illustrations bring a rich texture to the pages of this empowering story about facing your fears. Rhyme, repetition and alliteration work to provide a balance of familiar words and challenging vocabulary for this reading level.

FIRST DAY AT SCHOOL
Cynthia Knox
Fiction

Timmy woke up and jumped out of bed. “Mama, I’m going to school for the first time!” The first day of school is exciting for Timmy, who can’t wait to put on his uniform and gulp down his breakfast. He walks with his mother to meet his new teacher, then settles in to learn his alphabet, numbers and lots of other new things. This short, early level text promotes school attendance as something positive and enjoyable. With a kind teacher, new friends to meet and so much to learn, Timmy role models school as a fun place to spend the day – not merely a means to an educational end! At the end of his first day, Timmy can’t wait to tell his Mama about everything he has experienced, providing an example of intergenerational engagement in the education process.

SAMSON THE BABY ELEPHANT
Lynn May
Fiction

Serah is an African elephant. She is so happy! Her baby Samson has just been born. This title takes the reader on a gentle journey through the gestation and early development stages of the elephant life cycle. Elephants carry their babies for almost two years. When they are born, they already weigh about the same as 700 bananas!

Stunningly illustrated, this is an example of a contemporary factual book for children, with charming animal characters accompanying facts and figures. While this title is educational, it's also carefully written to avoid the specific use of weights and measures, opting instead for relatable comparisons. This gives it mobility between reading communities, as well as empowering children to use their imaginations.

20 BUSY LITTLE ANTS
Robyn Cain
Fiction

One little ant sitting on a stone. Two little ants, now he’s not alone.

One thing ants are particularly good at is team work! This book teaches the numbers from 1 to 20 as a community of ants sets out to find food. The more friends they find, the easier it will be to get across the river, parcel up some snacks and carry them back to the nest.

From Library For All’s Books That Travel collection, this book is culturally-neutral and designed to be enjoyed by beginner readers anywhere. It provides an engaging alternative to traditional counting books by adding one ant at a time whilst still maintaining a narrative that encourages readers to progress through the book to find out what happens next. Rhyming language also makes this an entertaining ‘read aloud’ story.

ISBN 978-1-925795-55-4
LFASKU00146

Serah and her baby hug each other by wrapping their trunks together. They talk to each other by making a noise that sounds like a cat purring.

Two little ants. Now he’s not alone.
